

Tony Clamp

Position/Department/Division/Institution/Organization

Director of the Green Climate Fund's Private Sector Facility

Country

Korea

Career history

Tony is Director of the Green Climate Fund's Private Sector Facility, based in South Korea, where he leads the private investment program in renewable energy and climate change sectors globally. He is also a member of the Senior Management Team and sits on the Climate Investment Committee.

Before joining the Green Climate Fund in 2017, Tony spent fifteen years as an investor and developer in the infrastructure, energy and water sectors based in London, and ten years in private sector, PPP and infrastructure investing in developing countries with the International Finance Corporation (IFC) based in Washington, DC.

Tony has over thirty years' experience in private equity, project finance and sustainable investment in developed and developing markets. He has an MBA from Cass Business School in London and an undergraduate degree in engineering.