Abstract title: The role of investors in achieving net zero

Realizing net zero by 2050 will require a coordinated, whole of economy approach and global investors have a critical role to play in this effort. Key actions required by investors roughly fall into three categories: investment processes, engagement and disclosure. In addition, as we seek to build back better from the COVID-19 crisis, investors must actively engage in public private partnerships with governments to fund a green, equitable and sustainable future. There are a growing number of investor-led climate initiatives that are already making a tangible impact such as Climate Action 100+, the UN-convened Net-Zero Asset Owner Alliance and more.
