Denmark is aiming to become fossil-free by 2050 and the engagement by the Danish players, both public and private sectors and consumers are crucial to drive the transition to a sustainable, low-carbon, resource-efficient society. Denmark also believes that through collaboration and dialogue, the global green transition is accelerated. Initiatives by the State of Green, a public-private partnership serving as a platform for sharing the accumulated Danish knowledge, experience and solutions with the rest of the world to stimulate debate, spur partnerships and inspire others will be introduced.
